"Nothing appears in the book to show whether the author superintended the printing of it or otherwise. He may have resided in London at the time of its publication, although there are some considerations that seem to lead to the conclusion that it may have passed through the press without his supervision."--S. G. Drake, pref. to ed. of 1860.
"It is thought by some that it was published in England on account of the unwillingness of publishers in Boston to incur the wrath of the Mather. But this is doubtful, as it was a common thing for authors to send over their manuscripts to England to be published."--S. F. Foster, pref. to ed. of 1861.

"Of this English translation three hundred copies printed by the Grabhorn press, San Francisco, in June 1929." This copy not numbered.
The text was drafted by Don Felipe de Neve, governor of California, on June 1, 1779, and printed in Mexico, 1784. In 1874 the California historical society published a reprint, of which all but six copies are believed to have been destroyed by fire. Of these, two are now in the Bancroft library at Berkeley, and a third—from which the present edition is taken—was in the collection of the late J. E. Johnson.

In August, 1908, the Commission published a preliminary report, announcing the plan of tax reform, and in December, 1908, made its final report to the Legislature. After the adoption by the Legislature in March, 1909, of Senate constitutional amendment no. 1, the Commission was reorganized. The present report presents data illustrating how, if the amendment had been in force during the year 1909, it would have affected the revenue.

"California college was first located in Petaluma, but of its history there, little can be ascertained. The first recorded beginning of the institution dates back to the annual meeting of the San Francisco Baptist association for 1862, held at Stockton. At that time a committee was appointed looking toward the establishment of a Baptist college for California. December 1, 1870, California college was organized ... in Vacaville. Here the college continued in existence until 1884, when the college board formally adopted a resolution to transfer the college to East Oakland. In 1887 the institution opened its doors on its present ... campus in East Oakland."—Annual catalogue of California college. May, 1908, p. 3.

Calisto and Melibea.

The tragic-comedy of Calisto and Melibea.

(In Dodsley, Robert, ed. A select collection of old English plays. 4th ed. by W. C. Hazlitt. London, 1874-76. 211^{cm}. v. 1, p. 31-92.)

Caption title. An interlude showing the beauty and good properties of women.
Founded on Celestina, tragic-comedy of Calisto y Melibea, an Italian translation of the Spanish tragic-comedy by Fernando de Rojas.
The earliest known edition, about 1530, has caption title: A new cōmodye in english in manner of an interlude right elegant & full of craft of rethorik / wherein is shewd & descrybd as well the bewte & good properties of women / as their vycys ... Hence the play has been cited as the "Beauty and good properties of women" but is generally known as "Calisto and Melibea."

Callet, Pierre Auguste, 1812-1883.

De la propriété littéraire. Un procès contre M. le duc de Noailles (de l'Académie française) et consorts, ou Fin de l'histoire de la marquise de Montagu, par Auguste Callet ... Paris, Librairie nouvelle, 1865.

164 p. 23^{cm}.

"The author's work 'Anne-Paule-Dominique de Noailles, marquise de Montagu,' written at the request of the family of Mme. de Montagu and based on documents left by her for the purpose, was printed anonymously in 4 editions, 1859-1864. The press attributed the work to the Duke of Noailles, who did not deny the authorship. In the suit brought in consequence by M. Callet, the latter was overruled by the decision of the Tribunal civil de la Seine, July 14, 1865.
